Report of the Ninth Ordinary General Meeting

(THIRTEENTH ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING).

THE NINTH ORDINARY GENERAL MEETING of the EGYPT EXPLORATION FUND since its incorporation as a Society (the thirteenth since the foundation of the Fund in 1882) was held on Thursday afternoon, November 14th, 1895, in the large room of the Zoological Society, 3 Hanover Square; Sir John Fowler, Bart., K.C.M.G., President, in the Chair.

There were present: Sir Edward Maunde Thompson, K.C.B., Vice-President; H. A. Grueber, Esq., F.S.A., Honorary Treasurer; Miss Emily Paterson, Secretary; D. G. Hogarth, Esq., M.A., Officer in charge of Explorations; T. H. Baylis, Esq., Q.C.; Miss Bradbury; T. Farmer Hall, Esq.; Mrs. McClure; Rev. Wm. MacGregor, M.A.; Mrs. Tirard; and Major-General Sir Charles Wilson, K.C.B., Members of the Committee; and several of the Local Honorary Secretaries.

The proceedings were opened by the CHAIRMAN, who called upon the Secretary to read the minutes of the last meeting, the list of Members of Committee who were retiring in rotation, and the list of Members and Hon. Auditors recommended for re-election. Mr. Hilton Price and Mr. Somers Clarke were recommended for election as new Members of Committee. This motion was proposed by Mr. A. J. Woodhouse, seconded by Mr. R. D. Wilson, and carried unanimously.

The following resolution, proposed by Mr. BASIL WOODD SMITH and seconded by Rev. JAMES MARSHALL, was carried: "That Major-Gen. Sir Francis Grenfell, G.C.M.G., and the Rev. Professor Sayce, M.A., be elected Vice-Presidents for England, and that the Hon. Chas. L. Hutchinson be elected Vice-President for Chicago, U.S.A."

Mr. HERBERT A. GRUEBER, Hon. Treasurer, then read his Financial Report for 1894-5, and presented the Statements of Accounts and Balance Sheet.

FINANCIAL REPORT OF THE HONORARY TREASURER FOR 1894-5.

The Report of the finances of the Fund which I have the honour to submit to you to-day, differs so slightly in its main details from that of the previous year, that it almost amounts to a simple repetition. This arises from the fact that the work carried out last season has been but a continuation, and I am glad to say almost a completion, of what was begun several seasons before.

As on former occasions, separate Statements of the Accounts of the Exploration Fund and the Archæological Survey have been prepared, together with a Balance Sheet.

I will take these Statements in the usual order. First as to the Exploration Account. From this you will see that the total expenditure for the year 1894-95 has been £3,093 17s. 1d., made up of the following items: (1) By the Expedition Account, £1,983 6s. 1d. As before, this includes the outlay for the actual excavations, and the salaries, travelling and living expenses of the officers attached to the expedition. As these correspond so closely to those of previous years I need not note them in detail, but will refer to one or two items which, perhaps, may require some explanation. The amount, £640 16s. 6d., for Mr. Hogarth's expenses may seem large; but besides his living expenses during the time he was at Deir el Bahari, it includes his salary, travelling expenses, the cost of the excavations at Alexandria, of which an interesting account is given in the Archæological Report just issued, and of the expedition which he made to the Delta and Fayûm at the request of the Committee to examine several sites which might seem desirable for future work of the fund. Mr. Percy Brown, the artist, took the place of Mr. Verney Carter as draughtsman, the latter being prevented by the state of his health from proceeding to Egypt last season. Mr. Brown's salary and expenses only cover the period that he was actually at work at Deir el Bahari. Those who saw his drawings, which were exhibited at the Society of Antiquaries last summer, will, I am sure, congratulate the Fund on securing the services of so excellent an assistant to Mr. Howard Carter. The other items under this heading need no explanation. (2) By Publications we have spent £618 14s 6d., which was incurred for the completion of the printing, illustrating and binding of Ahmas el Medineh and El Kab; the introductory volume to the great work on Deir el Bahari; the Archæological Report for 1893-4; and the Annual Reports for 1892-3 and 1893-4; and the usual expenses for packing, &c. The second edition of the Atlas of Ancient Egypt, which is an extra publication, cost £79 14s. 6d., whilst the Exhibition and Lecture Accounts amounted to £13 11s. 4d. and £23 2s. 3d. respectively. The last item includes the cost of the lantern for the use of local honorary secretaries and others, who may desire to lecture on behalf of the Fund. The Exhibition Expenses were incurred for the very successful exhibition at the rooms of the Society of Antiquaries of objects found at Deir el Bahari. And (3) by the usual outlay connected with rent of offices, clerical salaries, printing of circulars, stationery, &c., £375 8s. 5d.

The total receipts over the same period have been £2,216 13s. 9d.; viz.: (1) by subscriptions and donations from America, through the Rev. W. C. Winslow, £875, and from English and other subscribers £908 2s. 7d., making a total of £1,783 2s. 7d. (2) By the sale of the ordinary publications of the Fund, £145 15s. 5d. (3) By the sale of the Atlas of Ancient Egypt, £96 10s. 7d. (4) By the proceeds of lectures, £2 2s. 8d. (5) By one year's dividend on invested capital (£1,500 Consols), £39 17s. 8d. (6) By interest on Deposit Account, £1 18s. 9d.; and (7) By the Special Deir el Bahari Fund, £147 6s. od.

From these particulars it will be seen that the Fund's expenditure for the year has again exceeded its receipts. Last year I showed an excess of expenditure over income of £642 10s. 6d.; for this year I regret to say it amounts to £877 3s. 5d., thus reducing the capital of the Fund by the sum of £1,519 13s. 11d. The reason of this deficit is to be traced to the same cause as that of last year, viz., the heavy expenses connected with the work at Deir el Bahari. The actual expenses of the excavations are but slightly in excess of those of previous seasons; but the large staff which has been required to carry out the work in an efficient manner has again proved a strain on our resources. Happily, so far as the excavations are concerned, they are nearly at an end; and all that remains to be done is the clearing of a small space outside the area of the Temple. This will take but a few weeks to do, and the cost is not reckoned at more than £200. The work at Deir el Bahari, too, will not require the presence of Mr. Hogarth; so that he will be able to turn his attention to other investigations, of which you will be informed and which will not require any considerable outlay.

The cost of the publications has exceeded those of past years. This has been unavoidable, as it is often impossible to complete a publication by the end of the financial year; consequently a debt incurred in one year has to be carried over to the next one. Though the Committee cannot promise much reduction on this item for the present year, yet they are doing all they can to keep down the expenditure in this quarter also.

Turning to our receipts, we are met with a more favourable aspect of things. Our receipts by subscriptions are in excess of last year's by the sum of £229. This increase is due to the English subscribers as well as to those in America. There is also a small increase on the sale of publications; and the Atlas of Ancient Egypt will shortly more than recoup itself, though the second edition is not yet exhausted. The special Deir el Bahari Fund, which I suggested last year, brought in £147 6s. od., which came at a time very opportune to the Fund. I was in hope that the appeal would have met with even more success; yet the Committee are very grateful for even this help towards the great outlay.

I will now ask you to turn to the Balance Sheet of the Archæological Survey. The total expenditure of the Survey during 1894-5 has been £640 12s. 8d., which is composed of the following items: (1) By artists' expenses at Beni Hasan, £25 16s. od.; (2) by Publications, including the completion of El Bersheh I., a part expenditure on El Bersheh II., a proportional share of the Archæological Report, &c., £383 12s. 5d.; (3) by share of office expenses, such as printing circulars, stationery, postage, &c., £43 8s. 6d.; and (4) by balance to the Exploration Fund, £187 15s. 9d., being part of the remaining debt of £608 os. 2d. incurred in previous years. The receipts, on the other hand, have been £640 12s. 8d.; viz.: (1) By subscriptions and donations from America, through Dr. Winslow, £224 os. od., and from English and other supporters, £320 9s. 2d., making a total of £544 9s. 2d.; and (2) by the sale of publications connected with the Survey, £96 3s. 6d.

The subscriptions from America show a slight reduction on those of preceding years; but this may be accounted for in the delay which has taken place in the issue of the publications. This will be avoided in future by more promptness in bringing out the publications of this branch of the Fund's work. On the whole, however, there is a surplus of £187 15s. 9d., which, as I have said before, will go to reduce the debt of the Survey to the Exploration Fund. As there is still more material left for publication, I hope to be able to report to you next year a further reduction of this liability.

From the Capital Account it will be seen that the actual available assets of the Fund on August 1st, 1895, were £2,411 19s. 5d., which consisted of £1,500 Consols (=£1,479 8s. od.); Deposit at the Bank, £145 13s. 7d.;

Current Account, £783 5s. 7d.; and Petty Cash, £3 12s. 3d. It is on this sum that the Committee have formulated their budget for the coming season.

It is scarcely necessary for me to appeal to you again for your continued support. I know you all fully appreciate the work which is being carried out by the Fund; and this appreciation has been shown by an increased number of subscriptions.

But we are in the position of having to increase our capital, or rather I should say of having to restore it to its previous standard. Increased activity in a Society like the Egypt Exploration Fund incurs increased expenditure, and as our Society has taken a foremost place among learned Societies, I hope we shall be able to retain our position in the future.

It was proposed by Mr. F.W. PERCIVAL, and seconded by the Rev. WM. MACGREGOR, and carried, "That the Report of the Hon. Treasurer be adopted."

The PRESIDENT then called upon the Secretary to read her Report.

SECRETARY'S REPORT, 1894-5.

Our Treasurer's Report has pointed out that we have received a larger number of English subscriptions this year to both branches of the fund than in 1893-4, and this in spite of our losses by death and otherwise. Against this increase in our income, however, we have to set the far larger increase in our expenditure, and are urgently in need of increased subscriptions in the year 1895-6.

A great effort has been made to issue the Memoirs more punctually, but they are still so far behindhand that the Committee has decided that a new subscriber shall always receive the first book that is issued after the receipt of his subscription; therefore all new subscribers during 1895-6 will receive the first volume of the large series on Deir el Bahari. This volume, Deir el Bahari I., is now in the press. It contains twenty-four plates, of which twenty-one are reproductions from pencil drawings, and three are coloured plates reproduced from water-colours by Mr. Howard Carter, the letter-press being a detailed description and explanation of the plates. In this manner the Committee propose to publish all the scenes and inscriptions of the Temple. The final volume will sum up the teachings on art, crafts, and history derived from the excavation and study of the Temple.

All subscribers, who visited Deir el Bahari last season, will understand the magnitude of the undertaking in the matter of this publication, and can hardly fail to appreciate the manner in which it is being accomplished.

El Bersheh, II, the fourth Memoir of the Survey, and due to its subscribers for 1893-4, was distributed in September, and will shortly be followed by Beni Hasan, III. In the best tombs of Beni Hasan the hieroglyphic signs were still drawn and coloured in traditional conformity to the nature of the objects which they were originally intended to represent, and Beni Hasan III. will consist entirely of facsimiled coloured hieroglyphs and of details illustrating the manufacture and use of flint instruments as copied from these tombs, and of an explanatory letter-press by the editor of the Survey Memoirs. No collection of coloured hieroglyphs has hitherto been published, and the interest of this volume will be very great. May I venture to remind subscribers to the Survey that although there has been unavoidable delay in issuing the Survey Memoirs, there are still subscriptions which lag behind the publications?

Copies of the Archæological Report for 1894-5 are now in course of distribution to subscribers to both branches of the Fund. This number of the Report is the largest and most important yet issued. It contains a full report with map and plans of the excavations conducted by Mr. Hogarth in Alexandria. M. Naville's report on Deir el Bahari is a continuation of that contained in the Report for 1893-4. There are also papers by Messrs. W. E. Crum and F. G. Kenyon on the year's progress in Coptic and in Græco-Egyptian research, and the annual editorial report on the work of Egyptology in field and study.

A minor publication especially interesting to travellers in Egypt is a small guide to the now excavated Temple of Deir el Bahari, with plan, issued by the Committee at cost price.

An exhibition of the antiquities discovered at Deir el Bahari was held in Burlington House last July, by kind permission of the Society of Antiquaries, and was very well attended. The objects then exhibited will be presented, with your consent, to various Museums in Great Britain and America, and also to the Museums at Berlin and at the Louvre.

I would call the attention of subscribers to the facts that the third edition of Pithom is now out of print, and that the Committee do not see their way to bringing out a fourth and greatly revised edition unless the demand for it is considerable. May I ask, therefore, that any subscribers who desire to purchase Pithom will kindly send in their names at the earliest opportunity?

In America, Dr. Winslow has been assisted for the past two years by Miss Mary B. Comyns, who, I regret to say, has resigned. Miss Helen Dennison has, I understand, been appointed to take her place.

In Egypt, the work during the past season divides itself into two parts, that superintended by M. Naville, and that under Mr. Hogarth's direction. M. Naville and Mr. Hogarth reached Deir el Bahari in November, 1894, accompanied by the artists, Mr. Howard Carter and Mr. Percy Brown. The latter artist was appointed in place of Mr. Verney Carter, who could not stand the climate of Egypt. The excavations were continued on the Middle Platform, which had been partly cleared the previous season. Among the fragments of wall sculptures found in various parts of the temple were some portions of the scene depicting the famous expedition to Punt; and by the animals there represented, M. Naville is convinced that the Punt of Hatshepsu was a country on the African coast. These fragments also speak of "cutting ebony in great quantity," and show two kinds of houses used by the natives, one being made of wicker-work.

The Hathor Shrine had been entirely cleared by Mariette, but the vestibule was still covered with débris to a considerable height, and in the floor M. Naville discovered an untouched tomb of the XXVIth Dynasty.

In accordance with the agreement made with the Egyptian Government, a certain amount of rebuilding was done last winter. In the sanctuary, after raising a fallen lintel to rebuild a doorway, M. Naville was enabled to clear the first hall and the two chambers beyond it down to the pavement. Here he found a very interesting piece of sculpture representing the garden of the temple, its ponds and the fishes and aquatic birds belonging to it. On the lower platform were found several round pits, sunk into the rock, full of Nile mud, with stumps of palms and other trees or vines still in situ. A few small alabaster pots were found in these tree pits. The excavation of the whole temple was practically finished last winter, though there is still a certain amount of clearing to be done.

The artists continued their work of copying the wall sculptures. They completely finished copying the walls of the Hypostyle Hall, the Shrine of Anubis, and the Birth Terrace (i.e. the Northern portion of the Middle Colonnade), and began to copy the sculptures on the walls of the Punt Terrace and Southern Hall of Offerings, making a total of forty drawings, a few being in colour. There still remains about two more seasons' work for the artists, but the work of excavation will be completed this season.

Mr. D. G. Hogarth, assisted by Messrs. E. F. Benson and E. R. Bevan, of the British Archæological School at Athens, in February, 1895, tested the site of the ancient town and cemeteries of Alexandria, but the results of their work were most discouraging. They have proved, however, that there remains little or no hope of papyri being preserved, for, owing to the general subsidence of the land, the water has risen considerably over the whole of the area of the ancient city; thus the long-cherished dream of the recovery of the remains of the Great Library of Alexandria must be given up. A detailed report of this work will be found in the Archæological Report for 1894-5, and Mr. Hogarth will speak on the subject this afternoon.

After leaving Alexandria, Mr. Hogarth spent the last month of his stay in Egypt exploring sites in the Delta and in the Fayûm for future work. He visited Tell Farain (probably Buto) fifteen miles N. of Sais, the region S. and W. of Lake Mareotis, Tell Farama (Pelusium) and its neighbourhood, and the sites and surroundings of Heliopolis.

Mr. Hogarth also reported on certain sites in the Fayûm, and he strongly recommended the Committee to do some digging there. He also advised that Mr. B. P. Grenfell (who had already worked in the district) be asked by the Committee to work there for them. The Committee have adopted the suggestion, and Mr. Grenfell has consented to accompany Mr. Hogarth in ten days' time to dig in the Fayûm.

In view of the proposed Nile reservoir, Mr. Hogarth also reported upon the cataract region near Philæ. This island is about to be explored and excavated by Capt. Lyons for the Department of Public Works during the coming winter.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Before proceeding to the business of the meeting, I must ask your permission to refer to the great loss the Fund has sustained since our last meeting in the death of a very distinguished man, Professor Reginald Stuart Poole, who, with Miss Edwards, was one of the original founders of the Society. At first Professor Poole was Joint Hon. Secretary with Miss Edwards, and together for several years they practically undertook the whole management of the Fund, including the superintending of the excavations, the issue of the publications, and the keeping of the accounts. It was not until the work of the Fund had increased in their hands to something approaching its present extent that a regular Secretary was appointed, Miss Edwards still continuing at her post as Hon. Secretary. On the death of Miss Edwards, Professor Poole succeeded her as Hon. Secretary; and throughout his time of office he gave to his work without stint, and even after his health had begun to fail, the benefit of his energies, his wide knowledge, and great experience.

You have heard the Report of our Hon. Treasurer, which, with the balance sheet which accompanies it, presents in a very clear manner the financial position of the Fund. I do not think financial details greatly interest you, except inasmuch as they certify that our work continues to be carried out as was originally intended when the Egypt Exploration Fund was established. The main objects for which the Society was founded were:—

To organise excavations in Egypt with a view to the elucidation of the History and Arts of Ancient Egypt, and to the illustration of the Old Testament narrative so far as it has to do with Egypt and the Egyptians; also to explore sites connected with Greek History, or with the antiquities of the Coptic Church.

To publish periodically descriptions of the sites explored and excavated, and of the antiquities brought to light.

To ensure the preservation of such antiquities by presenting them to Museums and similar public institutions.

These were the objects originally laid down for the work of the Egypt Exploration Fund, and with greater experience every year we are more and more satisfied that we are accomplishing a work, which is gradually accumulating information that will throw light upon Biblical and Ancient Egyptian History beyond the expectations of the most sanguine.

So far from Egypt losing its interest with English people at home and abroad, we find the reverse to be the case; and as the country becomes more accessible, and is gradually and peacefully developed under beneficent care, the interest will become greater and our own work more appreciated.

I am often surprised when I look through the publications and reports of our admirable explorers that we have been able to do so much with the means at our disposal, but I feel confident we shall shortly be able to place in the hands of our Hon. Treasurer a more extended subscription list and an increased revenue; and I am sure I can promise on the part of the Committee and myself that every shilling placed at our disposal will be devoted to the good work for which it is intended.

The Report of the Secretary which has been read to you describes in some detail the work which has been actually done by our explorers on the ground, and the publications which have been issued, and the state of those in preparation. I regret there is still an apology required for delay; but in the very able hands of Sir Edward Maunde Thompson and the Publication Committee this delay is being minimised to the utmost practicable extent. The Secretary has stated that copies of the Archæological Report for 1894-5 are now in course of distribution to Subscribers to both branches of the Fund, and that this number of the Report is the largest and most important yet issued. An advance copy is now in my hands, and I can fully confirm this statement of our Secretary.

It is, of course, impossible for me to give you an epitome of its contents; but I will confer with the Publication Committee to see if it is not possible in future to have this Report in the hands of the subscribers a few weeks before the Annual Meeting.

There is one point in the Secretary's Report on which I should like to say a very few words, and that is with reference to the proposed Nile Reservoir at Philæ. It is quite settled that this work will not be commenced before proper steps are taken to explore and place on record the antiquities of the Island with a view to their preservation. This important work has been committed to the care of Capt. Lyons, who is also an officer of our Society. His explorations will be made for the purpose of information and record; the work will be done under the Egyptian Government, and there is to be a complete record made before any engineer or anyone else interferes to touch the Island.

I will now call upon the Secretary to read the Distribution List.

DISTRIBUTION OF ANTIQUITIES

FROM DEIR EL BAHARI.

MUSEUMS OF GREAT BRITAIN.

British Museum.—Set of foundation deposits. Beads of Senmut. Masks of Christian mummies. The Coptic ostraca.

Ashmolean Museum.—Set of three mummy-cases. Set of foundation deposits.

Edwards Museum, University College, London.—Set of foundation deposits.

Kew Museum.—Dated specimen of use of sycamore wood.

Glasgow Museum.—Mummy-case of child.

Bolton Museum.—Mummy-case with cartonnage.

Macclesfield Museum.—Hoe and winnower.

Glascote School Museum.—Specimens of blue glaze ware.

AMERICAN MUSEUMS.

Boston Museum.—Set of three mummy-cases. Set of foundation deposits.

Gîzeh Museum.—Set of foundation deposits.

Berlin Museum.—Set of foundation deposits.

Louvre Museum.—Set of foundation deposits.

Musée Guimet.—Mask of Christian mummy.

I have one word to say in regard to that list. You will see that the British Museum takes a very prominent place upon it. That institution has been one of our most valued friends, and we have always looked upon ourselves as attached to it, or at all events in very close connection with it. The help of its officers has always been of the greatest possible value to us, and I am happy to see the Principal Librarian amongst us to-day.

Sir E. MAUNDE THOMPSON: I will only use a very few words in expressing the gratitude of the Museum authorities in receiving these gifts from the Members of the Egypt

Exploration Fund. You may be quite sure that they will be safely kept. I do not think the Museum is likely to be sold up or destroyed, and therefore you may look upon it that the gifts you make to us are not only for our own use but for that of posterity as well.

Sir JOHN FOWLER: We have amongst us to-day Dr. Voelcker, Consulting Chemist to the Royal Agricultural Society—a Society upon which we poor farmers very much depend for information,—and who is the greatest authority upon many very important questions; and I will ask him now to describe to us the results of his examination of three vases that have been submitted to him for his opinion.

Dr. VOELCKER: I thought it better to come and give you personally one or two explanations in regard to these pots. Some short time ago I received from the Secretary of the Royal Agricultural Society these three small vases, with a request that I would examine them in order to find out, if possible, the nature of the materials of which the contents are composed. They were described as alabaster pots, and I notice the same term is used in the report which has just been read. But these are not alabaster pots at all, but marble; alabaster being a sulphate of lime, otherwise known as gypsum, whilst these are of the ordinary carbonate form of lime. The smallest one came to me with the lid not fitting closely on it; but the lids of the other two fitted exactly, and they were closed. On cutting away the gauze which is round them, I found that both these had contents; but that the largest one had only the remains of contents of the same material as that in the others, but part of it had run out. This one was also externally coated with the brown substance which you see upon the little band of gauze round it: but, of course, all the interest centred upon what the contents were; and the summary of my investigations is this, that the material enclosed is essentially a resin. It dissolves almost entirely in alcohol, leaving only ten per cent. of insoluble, and that siliceous, matter. But there is no sign in any of the contents of the vessels to indicate the presence of grain; and practically, so far as I can tell, the material in these pots is a resin or a mixture of resins. What the material was originally I cannot say; but when the pots came to me the contents were adhering to one side only, as if the material had been put in originally in a more or less viscid state and the pots laid down in this way, or at least some time subsequently. The material has accumulated round one side and runs over the edge of the lid, so that in the case of this pot, where the material has entirely disappeared, the marks on the lid correspond exactly with those on the lids of the others from which the material has not exuded. All resins are liable to change. What resins these were depends upon the materials from which they were drawn; but in all cases the essential oils would in course of time disappear, leaving only the hard substances. On putting these materials into heat, I find there is a certain portion of oil in them still, which is of more or less bituminous nature, but the quantity is very small. If the subject is of such interest as to have already been investigated, I thought by coming here I might gather from someone the nature of the resins that were in use in those times, and for what purposes they were used. It has been suggested that possibly unguents were put into these vessels; but I do not think the result of my investigations is in favour of that idea. It is much more likely that the material was incense, or probably a mixture of resins. I think I have seen it stated somewhere that it was the custom to use resins for the purpose of embalming mummies, and it is quite possible these resins were the same as those used for that purpose.

REPORT ON LAST SEASON'S WORK BY MR. HOGARTH.

As it is already late I do not propose to detain you long, but first of all I will touch a moment upon the question of Philæ. I was a member of the party which went up to Philæ with Mr. Garstin and various engineers and officers in the beginning of February of this year, and it was on that occasion that the idea of the exploration of Philæ was first mooted. I believe that work has now already been begun. The island itself is of granite, and it is a very important question whether the temples there rest upon granite or upon large spaces between the boulders of granite filled in with earth. It was decided that a preliminary examination should take place all round the temple, and that any archæological results should be very carefully preserved. I am personally most glad to find that this work has been entrusted to Captain Lyons, R.E.; for I do not know that there is any other man among the Europeans in Egypt who is so well qualified to take the work in hand. He is a very capable engineer, and as an Egyptologist he is almost in the first rank; besides which, he has all the knowledge requisite for such work. This work will, I believe, be the most interesting carried on in Egypt in the course of next season.

When I last had the privilege of addressing the subscribers to this Fund, I had to speak lightly about work in which I was only partially concerned, namely, the work at Deir el Bahari; but this time I may speak more particularly about that work, as M. Naville is not here, for I was there during some of the early part of the year: when most of the interesting things, however, were found in February I was not present. However, I have seen so much of the place that I feel qualified to speak about it to-day, and I may say that the work there is now practically finished. The whole temple is clear with the exception of a certain amount of rubbish to be moved away. Large excavations of this kind always leave a certain amount of débris about. There is besides a small portion to the south of the temple which may or may not contain a part of the structure; I am not sanguine that it does. M. Naville proposes in the course of next season to work for two or three weeks only at that southern portion, and if the temple does not continue upon that side I suppose he will desist from the work. I have said before that the completion of the work at Deir el Bahari is a thing upon which the Society can very cordially congratulate itself. If the Society were to dissolve to-morrow, or even by a vote to-day, it would have more than justified its existence by adding one more to the very small list of first-rate monuments, an achievement which places any society above the reach of depreciation. If you look at Baedeker's New Guide Book on Upper Egypt edited by Dr. Steindorff, and about to appear, you will find, I understand, that instead of there being only two pages devoted to Deir el Bahari as was the case formerly, there are now ten pages given to the subject, and in that way this temple of yours is put upon the level of Medinet Habû and even of Karnak.

A gentleman, who is perhaps the highest authority on Greek and Roman archæology in this country, was speaking to me about Deir el Bahari in the summer, and with reference to the question of the expenditure on that place he said: "I may say it is the biggest and best thing which has been done by English Archæological enterprise since the exploration of Nineveh." And now there is nothing left to be done except that little bit on the south side. When we began work three years ago we had very sanguine ideas on the subject of putting back the blocks of sculpture; but we have since discovered that the walls have been so ruined that I am afraid, even after the expenditure of an enormous amount of time, it would be found impossible to replace more than twenty per cent. of the blocks we have found. But the artistic staff must be supported at Deir el Bahari for at least another year. You have been told that the artists who have gone out are to be reinforced: they will have as much work to do as has been done. Although the plates you have are extremely interesting and beautiful, yet I can assure you that the plates to come are still more so. The artists last year began to copy the great Expedition to Punt, scenes of which rank among the best bas-relief sculptures in the world.

And now a word in regard to a work with which I was wholly concerned—that is, the exploration of Alexandria. In reference to that, I am compelled to stand before you as a failure; but do not suppose that I am on the stool of repentance, for if you look into the Archæological Report dealing with that exploration you will see that certain results have been achieved which are not without value. In speaking about Alexandria, and in being obliged to confess that I cannot recommend the Society to continue its work there, I should like to be allowed to say one thing for fear of being misunderstood. I hope that no discouragement of mine in regard to the work of this Society will be held to be discouragement to the residents of Alexandria, who are engaged in the work of exploring their own city. They have, of course, better opportunities for accomplishing the task, as they can work at all seasons and at a less cost than this Society can do it; besides which, they have not, as we have, the duty of working upon other sites in Egypt which will produce results more quickly and give us fuller value for the money we spend. Still more, the residents have a sentimental interest in the remains of the town which does not exist in the case of the members of this Society. In regard to the relics of the Roman period, for instance, the topographical remains have an interest and a value to the people in Alexandria which they have not to the subscribers to this Society. The problem presents itself to us and to them in a different way, and because we cannot undertake the work in Alexandria that is no reason for saying that the work is not worth undertaking by anybody. For myself, I regret that I am not able to ask you to undertake more work there. One thing which led me to wish to explore Alexandria was the hope that we should get some knowledge of that Hellenized Jew, who was so prominent for two centuries before and for two centuries after Christ. I have always held that the whole subject of Egyptology is a little barren, because we cannot connect it with the life of the present day. The bridge which the Mycenaean period affords is but a bad and rickety structure at best. That Hellenized Jew, who pervaded Egypt under the Ptolemies, may furnish a far sounder link between the ancient civilisation of Egypt and ourselves. If through him the forms and dogmas of our Faith could be affiliated, however remotely, to Old Egypt, what a gain to Egyptology! That connection may yet be made, but I am afraid it will not be done in Alexandria. Another point which has been proved, is that there is absolutely no chance of recovering from the soil of Alexandria any remains of its libraries. The water under the city is the main cause of this. Even where the water does not reach, there is so much damp sucked up by capillary attraction from the earth that there is no chance, even if any papyri were found in Alexandria, that they would be preserved in any condition that would allow of their being read at the present day. Whether the libraries were totally destroyed or not I cannot say; but I am perfectly certain that there are not under the houses of Alexandria at this day any remains of any one of the great libraries. If you will read my statement in the Archæological Report you will see the difficulties which beset me and the reasons which induced me to stop the work. There were three main reasons for this, and the first—the water—was the worst. Then there was the difficulty of getting at the various places. This was very great, because the sites are all private property, and although the utmost kindness was shown in giving me leave to dig, yet often I could not do very much, since there were houses all round me, the foundations of which could not be disturbed; also, where the land is waiting to be built on, it is none the better for having the soil disturbed or the stones removed. The third reason was this, that even when I did get down through the water I found everything in the utmost state of ruin—walls knocked down, pavements ripped up, everything as it would be left after the most awful sack and pillage. I was not prepared for this; but I find that everyone, after a few years' experience of Alexandria, quite recognises this spirit of destruction. Dr. Botti met with the same state of things during his research in the region of Pompey's Pillar. I cannot explain why it is. Many of you are probably cognisant of the history of Alexandria; if you are not from other sources, you probably know Kingsley's novel, Hypatia, and the misrule and scenes of turbulence which he describes. As a matter of fact, the Arabs themselves are more responsible for the destruction of Alexandria than even the early Christians or the Roman mob. Under the Moslem rule Cairo so utterly superseded Alexandria that the latter was no doubt utterly denuded for the benefit of the former. In any case, books must be looked for, if they are looked for at all, somewhere else than in Alexandria or the rainy Delta—somewhere higher up the Nile, where man has been less active.

The Faiyûm is the bed of an ancient lake, and in the Roman times was the health or summer resort of the leading Romans. There are several little mud-brick towns on the edge of the Delta, from which dealers' shops have been filled with papyri for the last few years, but in many cases their quality is not equal to their quantity. The literary treasures of the monasteries of Sinai and Mount Athos are by this time pretty well known, and we are not likely to get any more from them. Constantinople is not all known indeed, and there may be things even now in palaces or mosques, but the chances are not very great; and therefore it is mainly to Egypt that we must look. I attach enormous value to the finding of new editions of the classics. It is not only that we may find something of Menander and Sappho, but there is the possibility of finding some early Christian literature. Some day or other a New Testament of the second century must turn up in Egypt. There is therefore a great chance that we shall some time or other come upon early copies of most valuable documents in regard to the Christian religion—copies of the books of the New Testament and early patristic literature. There is, for example, the book of Papias of Hierapolis, referred to by Eusebius in not very respectful terms, which will have an enormous interest for the world when it is found. Papias was a disciple of St. John, and he wrote out what he had heard from the lips of his master, of the actual words and deeds of their common Master Christ, and that invaluable work may be found sooner or later amongst the patristic documents in Egypt. Let me conclude with that. I do not promise you anything very great, but we shall leave no stone unturned; and we intend, if possible, to settle the question of the Faiyûm as fully as I have settled the question of Alexandria, and I hope in a more favourable sense.

Sir E. MAUNDE THOMPSON having proposed a vote of thanks to the Chairman, the proceedings then terminated.
